Lacamas Lake Drawdown Extended Until January 31, 2018

Camas, Wash. – Georgia-Pacific’s Camas mill will begin the Lacamas Lake drawdown on Monday, September 18 for the annual inspection of the dam.

Usually this process only lasts a few weeks; however, this year due to ongoing work by the City of Camas on the North Shore Sewer Transmission System project, at the request of the city the lake level will remain low until January 31, 2018 or until work on the city’s project is complete.

The public is asked to contact the City of Camas if they have any questions regarding the extended lake drawdown or the North Shore Sewer Transmission System project. The city’s contact is Sam Adams, (360) 817-7003.

“We thank Georgia-Pacific for accommodating our request and apologize if there is any inconvenience to lake users; however, this is an important project for the city that will have a positive environmental impact for the community,” states City of Camas City Manager, Pete Capell.

“We always strive to be a good neighbor and we are pleased we could work cooperatively with the City of Camas and accommodate their request,” adds Georgia-Pacific Camas Mill Public Affairs Manager, Kristi Ward.
